Eighties will be back, big hair and all

The 1980s is the next decade in the progression of the Brighton Historic Preservation Commission galas.

"Back to the Eighties," is the theme, and period music will be provided by Ronnie Raygun and the Big Eighties (who look a lot like BoogieMachine)."

The sixth annual gala will include a catered dinner and live/silent auction. The happening will be Nov. 11 in the Armory Performing Arts Center, 300 Strong St., starting at 6 p.m.

Guests are encouraged to dress in period attire. The proceeds from the event help fund local historic preservation efforts within the Brighton community.

Tickets are $30 and can be purchased online at brightonarmory.org.

Sponsorships are available for the event at the following levels:

"Breakfast Club" – Table sponsorship - $150; "Totally Tubular" – Table sponsorship plus 4 event tickets – $250; "Top Gun" – Table sponsorship plus 10 event tickets for a full table – $500. To learn more contact Sheryl Johnson at 303-655-2042 or email at sjohnson@brightonco.gov.
