Training center open to visitors

A new report put Colorado in the bottom half (29th of 50) of safest states in the country, according to financial services website WalletHub.

Violent crimes, workplace hazards, bullying and neighborhood safety are among factors considered in the report. Those safety issues are among the scenarios that law enforcement officers prepare for at FLATROCK Regional Training Center.

This weekend, the Adams County Sheriff's Office invites members of the public to step inside its exclusive training facility and experience those same challenges.

"We're charged to uphold the law and keep the peace," Adams County Sheriff Michael McIntosh said. "We're also joining forces with members of the public so they can promote safety in their own neighborhoods. This Open House at FLATROCK is a great way to see how we provide high-quality training that benefits the community."

The FLATROCK Open House & Career Expo is 9 a.m.-4 p.m., Saturday. Doors open at 8:30 a.m. People 14 years or older can sign up for tours of the facility every 20 minutes. The event is at 23600 E. 128th Ave., Commerce City.

Spots are limited. Members of the
