

Brighton window

Ted Walters (with Patricia Galvez) of Brighton paints a lake scene on Saturday from a spot in the eagle-nest-viewing gazebo at Barr Lake State Park. Walters and other local artists were part of the third Art in the Park program Saturday at Barr Lake, where they set up their easels and reproduced nature scenes in "real time." Some of the art will be sold at the Barr Lake Nature Center. See another photo Page 2.

BURA seeks proposals for S. Main

The Brighton Urban Renewal Authority is seeking proposals for acquisition and redevelopment of the properties at 880, 825, 811, 750 and 740 S. Main St., Brighton.

BURA began acquiring the portions of the site in 2015 with the final acquisition taking place in December 2016. BURA anticipates the site to be cleared by mid-summer and is completing a land swap with CDOT in order to maximize the developable area at the gateway.

The BURA staff will hold an optional pre-proposal meeting at 2 p.m. Wednesday at Brighton City Hall to discuss the RFP and answer questions. Questions regarding the RFP should be directed via email to rjohnson@brightonco.gov no later than 5 p.m. this Friday.

The city and the Urban Renewal Authority see the site as a premier gateway into Brighton and are interested in proposals that incorporate mixed-use design principles and activate the outdoor space in a highly visible intersection. Proposals must include construction of new buildings and must be accompanied by a firm and credible method of financing the acquisition of the property consistent with the vision and goals of the Authority.

Responsive proposals submitted on or before 5 p.m. on July 7, to BURA Executive Director Ryan Johnson at 500 S. Fourth Ave., Brighton, CO 80601, will be considered by BURA.
